Editorial: MOVING

Our theme this time is 'moving'. Our articles and exercises cover subjects like moving house and transport, as well as things that are emotionally 'moving', that is they give you strong feelings. We also have some articles about special days at this time of the year.

At the easiest levels you can read about Fathers' Day and the change to daylight saving time next month. You can also read a story about how a family got to know people when they moved house in New Zealand, and a story about a young man moving out from home. The exercises help you to talk about time and about feelings.

At the intermediate level we have articles about cars, driving and public transport. There is also an article about Ramadan, an important Muslim festival which many of our readers are observing at this time of year. The exercises involve two part verbs and prepositions, and a crossword on the topics of this issue. In our Readers' Page we have three articles about moving, and feelings about family.

At the most advanced level you can read about buying a used car and the World Day of Indigenous (native) People this month. The Idioms Corner has idioms we often use when we are talking about emotions, and there is also a discussion about cars and driving.

We hope you enjoy it and find it interesting and helpful. And don't forget to look at our new website (see the box on page 16)!
